They restored him sufficiently to answer the bell in the ninth but Kaufman knocked the Colorado pugilist completely out.

Bidding his wife God-speed at the American-Holland pier, Earle returned to the affinity, Miss Kuttner, who had been staying as a guest in the Earle home for a fortnight or more before the departure of Mrs. Earle.

Earle declared when he discovered his "twins" and put away his wife and young son, in order that they might not interfere with the train of his remarkable romance, that he had revived the unforgettable. Tristan and Isolde love stories.

More Smuggling

Chicago, Aug. 26.—Facts were brought to light today showing that another Chicago woman has been in the rolls of the government as a result of seizure by customs officials of $10,000 worth of fine lace which had been smuggled into New York. The woman, Mrs. Sarah Greenman, one of the city's fashionable dressmakers, is now in a state of nervous collapse as a result of her experience. So great is her remorse and worry that she has been placed in a sanitarium at Kokomo, Ind.

BEATS SOUL MATE AND GOES TO JAIL TO AWAIT TRIAL

Ferdinand Earle's Tristan and Isolde Love Affair in Police Court.

Artist Who Put Aside Wife and Son, Common Fellow.

END OF PECULIAR ROMANCE

New York, Aug. 26.—The most celebrated soul-mate romance of modern times—that of Ferdinand Earle, the artist, and Julia Kuttner, the settlement worker—fell elastically into the world and ordinary police court class when Earle was arrested on charge of beating his "infidelity," the present Mrs. Earle, and was locked in the Gotham jail.

Earle, with tears in his eyes, pleaded guilty in court to the charge brought against him. He offered no word of explanation or no justification of his cruel treatment of his wife, his soul mate and affinity. He refused to even make an effort to obtain bail and went to jail to await the action of the grand jury, which meets in October, claiming that he was well satisfied to fare as well as anyone else would under the same circumstances.

The charge of assault was made by Mrs. Inez Barry, an aunt of Mrs. Julia Kuttner Earle. It is alleged that on August 16, twelve days after a baby was born to his affinity wife, Earle choked and beat her. Earle's marriage with his affinity has never been published.

After his first wife went to Paris, Earle and Isolde secured a divorce in the court of first instance. Earle and Julia Kuttner also went abroad and when they returned to this country in April it was announced that they had been married. They have since been living at Seaside, near the country home of Earle near Monroe. The baby was born on August 1.

At Monroe it is said that Mrs. Earle No. 2 would have taken no action in regard to the alleged brutal treatment of Earle, had not her brothers, Albert and Charles Kuttner, insisted upon it.

Ferdinand Pinney Earle put his first wife away, a French woman, almost exactly a year ago. He was acting on his convictions in the matter, he said, "Conditions over which we have lost all control have made it better that we should be apart," he said.

Accordingly it was agreed between them that they should part, and she sailed with the children in the early part of April.

Bidding his wife God-speed at the American-Holland pier, Earle returned to the affinity, Miss Kuttner, who had been staying as a guest in the Earle home for a fortnight or more before the departure of Mrs. Earle.

STATE'S ATTORNEY SAYS HAINS TRIES TO STIR UP ARMY

New York, N. Y., Aug. 26.—Prosecutor Darrin has issued a long statement outlining his course in the Hains trial. He denounces the story that Anna boasted frequently of the conquest of Mrs. Hains and threatened to kill her husband, and declared all army officers are easy victims. He declares the scheme is to "inflame army officers and keep them from telling what they know about Hains." Darrin insists that Hains is not insane, but merely frightened over the possible consequences of the killing.

PLUNGES THROUGH SKYLIGHT DOWN TO CONCRETE FLOOR

As the result of a plunge through a skylight, William Shaw, a fourteen-year-old negro boy, had his skull fractured this morning about 7:50 o'clock in the Columbia building, where he works as janitor. Shaw, it is presumed, while cleaning a window, he lost his balance and fell through the glass skylight. He fell head first, and struck the concrete floor in Biederman's store.

No one was in the office, but the clerks in the store below were startled to see Shaw falling from the ceiling, which is about 10 feet high. Cecil Reed, who has an office in the building, heard the crash as he went up the steps, and looked down the skylight to see Shaw motionless on the floor. Shaw was lifeless for about five minutes, but Drs. Sights, Red-Jack, Griffith and Pulliam rallied him. The negro's skull was fractured, and he was sent out the back by the glass in the skylight. He was carried to his home, Eighth and Caldwell streets, in the patrol wagon.

This afternoon Shaw is conscious at times, but the doctors have not found the fracture of the skull. The physicians state that the fall may have fractured the skull at the base. Dr. Van J. Davis made a close examination of the head and he found that the skull had been cut by the glass, but failed to find a fracture. Shaw has been unconscious most of the time and has failed to give an account of how he fell through the skylight.

NEWPORT RAFFLES BAFFLES POLICE; DISTURBS SOCIETY

Newport, R. I., Aug. 26.—Although the police guarding the cottage settlement are as watchful as ever, yet valuable jewels continue to disappear mysteriously and with no clue to the identity of the thief. A feeling of alarm pervades the settlement and society folk continue to rush to safe deposit vaults to store their precious ornaments.

All Newport heard that Mr. and Mrs. Norman Hapgood, of New York, who attended the Herwind ball and had been visiting Peter F. Collier, were looking for a diamond ornament Mrs. Hapgood had lost at the ball. The couple returned to New York without having located the valuable jewel.

The police feel convinced that the jewel thefts have been committed by some one who has, entire to the most exclusive circles of Newport's swell. But they are baffled in finding a clue to his or her identity. The operator works with the expertness of a master in the thievery craft and successfully protects his identity behind the cloak of mystery.

Another chapter has been added to the loss of Mrs. John Borland's diamond butterfly at the ball given by Mr. and Mrs. Edward J. Berwold last Saturday, by the report that Mrs. Jacobs, wife of Dr. Henry B. Jacobs, of Newport, and Baltimore, lost a diamond pendant at the same ball or while driving there in her car.

"I shall play in it, of course. A young author is now engaged in writing a one-act play for me. And, of course, I will give opera. My course of vocal study with Jean de Resek has just been completed. LAWYERS OPENED ANNUAL SESSION

Seattle Welcomes Members of the American Bar.

Was One of the Opening Features—Association of American Law Schools Meeting.

THE PRESIDENT'S ADDRESS

Seattle, Wash., Aug. 26.—The American Bar association in annual session here heard the annual address by President J. M. Dickinson. Mr. Dickinson spoke in part as follows:

President Dickinson after a few introductory remarks entered upon a discussion of the legislative situation so far as it relates to the enactment of new laws in the various states of the union. He said:

"The vices of legislation engaged the attention and were the principal theme of many of my predecessors. The trouble is inherent in the nature of our institutions. With the conditions as they exist the evil is incurable. While youth, inexperience and ignorance constitute no legal bar to political preferment, while manhood suffrage is the source of all governmental power, while so many of those most capable of ruling prefer selfishly their personal pleasures and private interests to the general welfare, so long will we suffer the maximum of burdens that come from unwise and unskilled legislation. The best that we can hope to accomplish is to bring about, as we have been doing with marked success, the enactment of uniform legislation in the several states. Our work will in the main be constructive. We can accomplish practically nothing in the way of restraint."

Courts Barely Agree.

Much recent legislation of doubtful constitutionality, congressional and state, has been practically enforced by provisions for minority, heavy and cumulative fines and imprisonment, devised in some cases expressly for the purpose of preventing a resort to the courts for relief. When the highest courts of the land, not exceptionally, but with a frequency that almost makes it normal, divide on constitutional questions often determining the result by a bare majority, a lawyer will rarely, especially when the question is new, advise a client to pursue a course, which, by subjecting him to the possibility of paying cumulative daily fines, and no imprisonment, may destroy him.

Courts Not Respected.

"For a long time, prior to recent years, judgments of courts, especially those of final resort, were received with the greatest respect. There was in the minds of the American people a profound regard for the judicial department of government. In various ways in recent times, and from sources too influential with public opinion to be ignored, the very foundations have been assailed upon which the stability of the courts rests. Judicial judgments are not accorded the same respect as formerly. Individual judges should be assailed if they are corrupt, or incompetent. It is no assault upon the institution to attack them for such causes in a proper way. While impeachment should not be lightly invoked, yet it is an indispensable safeguard. The impeachment of judges properly pursued, would not undermine the confidence in the institution any more than would unfrocking a priest destroy reverence for the priesthood. Not a court, but the courts are frequently and fiercely attacked. Political parties of all creeds have bowed their heads in recognition of a disconcert, which is not general, at least bears the appearance of potentiality. All of this tends to destroy confidence in the courts and to make a subversive judiciary. The people have been led away from the principle that the independence of the judiciary is one of the mainstays of civil liberty under self-government, which is based on mutual self-restraint, and the belief that it is no less important than the principle of representation itself."

Where the Judges Lie.

"Perhaps the judges are not altogether free from blame. When in the decision of cases of great public importance, upon which the attention of the whole country is centered, they assail opposing opinions as subversive of the constitution and fraught with direct evils for the future of the country, it is not surprising if such retort will in time undermine the public confidence in at least the wisdom of the courts."

"The evil exists in public opinion and the remedy must come through public opinion."

BILLION AND HALF IN OLD PAPER IS SOLD FOR $2,250.

Washington, Aug. 26.—Sixteen freight cars, carrying a burden which once represented $1,500,000,000, were shipped from here to Kalama, Wash. Two million five hundred thousand paid and cancelled money orders were sent by the postoffice department to a contractor in the Michigan city, who bought the 300 tons of them at $7.50 a ton, to convert into ordinary paper.

The last congress amended the law providing that all cancelled money orders should be retained seven years so that they can now be sold after three years.

It indicates a sluggish condition of the business blood.

Dust accumulates where trade decays. Dusting the shelves with a duster is like taking drugs—a dose now and then relieves, but it doesn't cure.

BUILDING ACTIVITY

RESUMED ON A LARGE SCALE IN NEW YORK CITY.

Statistics from the Country at Large Show Big Improvement Over Past Year.

The New York Journal of Commerce, discussing the building situation, has the following:

Savings banks, mortgage companies, trust companies and other institutions have decided to encourage a resumption of building activity in New York city and vicinity by lending money to trustworthy builders at 5 per cent, and occasionally less. Preparations have been made to carry out forthwith projects that were compulsorily suspended last year by the severe financial tension, while in Washington Heights, on the West Side, and on the East Side many new structures are being erected. The George A. Fuller Construction company, for example, has more work on hand than it had even in 1906, while information received from other contractors goes to show that the activity is ahead of last year. In July the value of the buildings under construction ahead of July, 1907, while for the whole country last month showed an increase over the corresponding period a year ago, this being the first increase in fully twelve months.

A building can be erected in New York today for 25 per cent less than the cost of one year ago. This fact has an intimate connection with the revival now noticeable. Not only has material, generally speaking, declined 25 per cent, but wages, which form so important an item in the cost of a building, have undergone a change that means equally as much saving to the builder. Trade union schedules do not reflect any such reduction in current rates of pay, but it is the universal experience of employers of labor that they now receive from 25 to 35 per cent more work from a given number of men than they received during the heyday of prosperity. At the end of March last practically one-half the men engaged in the building trades were out of employment. The keenness of competition for jobs resulted in lower wages in many directions—sometimes not known to the unions, perhaps—and in every direction the services rendered were very much more satisfactory than formerly. This has meant a marked economy in construction.

JOE PRESS FREEZES ICE CREAM.

Editor Runs Off Handbills While Making Dessert.

Stamford, Conn., Aug. 26.—When William A. White labored as an editorial writer for Connecticut newspapers his work was noted for a flavor of originality. Now he has retired after 40 years as a newspaper man and he runs a little printery premises here, but he has not forgotten how to be original.

That was evident when a party of friends found him trying out a new way of operating an ice cream freezer. He had a regulation freezer ingeniously connected with the job press, and while he turned off handbills and bill heads on the electrically driven press, the family ice cream was being frozen.

"So you don't like modern method of handling a campaign?"

"No," responded Farmer Whiffletree. "I used to be a big man and a leading citizen, but now I'm only a number on a card index."—Pittsburg Post.

Wrestling Match.

Another big wrestling match will be held next Tuesday evening at the Eagles' hall by the Paducah Athletic club. It has been several months since there have been any bouts on the mat. Manager Leslie Jones has arranged for four interesting goes and the championship of Paducah as well as the lightweight championship will be at stake. The rules will be catch-as-catch-can, two out of three throws. Good sport was furnished by the club last winter, and this autumn some good bouts are expected.

The bouts will be: Leslie Jones, champion of Paducah, and Bob Bower, Claude Reeder, lightweight champion, and Thomas Cather; Oran Bell and Joe Woods, and Henry Ruff and Claude English. The wrestling matches will begin at 8:30 o'clock.

NEW CAPS

WILL BE WORN BY CAPTAINS OF FIRE DEPARTMENT.

Chief Wood Will Bring Back Headgear for the Officers From Columbus.

When Fire Chief Wood returns from Columbus, O., where he is attending the meeting of the International Fire Chiefs association, he will bring home new headgear for the four fire captains. The captains will be the regulation cap, with two gold bands around the crown. "Captains," with the number of the station, will be on the crown of the cap. Also the crown will be half an inch higher than the regulation caps of the fire ladders. The captains of the stations have always worn the same cap as the firemen.

BETTER SELL YOUR CAST-OFF CLOTHING THAN LET THE FIRST "HOBO" FOOL YOU

YOU can turn your cast-off clothing into ready money by spending a few pennies in the want ad columns of THE SUN. Buyers will call at your door and pay you a good price for wearing apparel of any kind. The schedule runs about as follows: Old suits, dark, $1.50 to $5.00; overcoats, $2 to $6; hats, 25c to 75c; shoes, 25c to $1. A fall clean-up—a clearance sale—will often net you $10 to $25. Isn't this money just as good to you as to the rum shop?

There was a time when people thought it their solemn duty to hand out their worn-out toggery to the first Weary William who inflicted his hard luck story on the giver. But times have changed. When gentlemen observed their charity clothing in pawnshop windows, or saw the recipient of their good nature in a "jamboree," a change set in and today a good many of the best people sell their old garments and shoes to "visiting" buyers. No doubt many of your friends sell theirs and perhaps you are able to sell a few things, with the aid of 50c or 75c you pay your cook for her aid. Competition, though, means good prices and you can get all kinds of buyers with a 25c ad in THE SUN. Why don't you try it today? Write the ad then phone 358 and see how much it will be or figure it for yourself—

The cash rate is 2c a word for three times or 1c a word for one time. Pay that small fee and over 10,000 people have the ad placed before them.

ARMOR BELT

FLORIDA AND UTAH TO BE OF DELAWARE TYPE.

War College Decides, However, That Armor on Future Ships Will Be Lowered.

Washington, Aug. 26.—The summer conference of officers at the Naval War college at Newport, which for the last six weeks have been discussing battleship designs, will not recommend any immediate changes in the location or width of the main armor plate.

It was learned here that the two new battleships, the Florida and the Utah, will have the same armor protection along the water line as the vessels of the Delaware type. The Delaware type have a main armor belt 8 feet wide, 6 1/2 feet of which is below the water line at full load. It is 11 inches in thickness and ships.

Will Lower Armor Belt.

In future battleships, however, the report will recommend that the armor belt be lowered because the great advance toward perfecting torpedoes and increasing their radius of action has demonstrated that greater protection below the water line will have to be provided.

Military masts will be abandoned and the new battleships will be equipped with one and possibly two steel fire control towers 90 feet high, similar to the type recently tested in Hampton Roads. It is expected that that report of the conference will be submitted to President Roosevelt in a few days, and as soon as he has approved it the preliminary work will be begun on the Florida, which is to be built in the New York navy yard.

DRANK TOO MUCH ICE WATER. Man Can't Speak After Drinking 25 Cupfuls.

Lawrenceburg, Ind., Aug. 26.—Much drinking of ice water in hot weather is believed to have been responsible for the loss of speech of Thomas Moss, 51 years old, of Indianapolis, who conducts a restaurant in the Indiana fair circuits, known as "47 1/2 Broadway."

In one day he drank 25 large tin-cupfuls. He drank four cupfuls of water in succession, and in a few minutes he complained of a peculiar feeling in his throat. Soon after his neck felt as if bombarded and he found that he was unable to talk. He made known his condition by means of paper and pencil.

Moss was unable to speak for several hours, after which he made himself understood by whispering.

Artificial Limb Leaves Imprints on the Ground Which Result in Owner's Conviction.

Springfield, Mo.—The imprints of his wooden leg were the cause of the conviction of Charles Dukes of a burglary charge in the criminal court here this afternoon. Detectives caught a glimpse of the imprints of his wooden leg and arrested him. Then he confessed to the robbery.

BRYAN ON THE TRUSTS.
The Sun published Bryan's Indiananapolis speech on the subject of "Trusts", and sincerely hopes, that every voter read it carefully and scrutinizingly; for, while in Taft we have a tried and tested executive, belonging to a party that has been in power more than forty years, and part of an administration, whose policies he promises to carry out, in Mr.
Bryan we have a man, seeking to supercede that administration with other policies—an untied man, who proposes specific remedies for evils he himself defines.

The Sun undertakes today to criticize Bryan's position on the trust question. Bryan may be right and The Sun wrong; but our purpose is honest and our mind seeking the truth. Whether or not we have attained to it, our reasoning will show.
We remember how Bryan said in his Des Moines speech that he favors putting on the free list every article sold in foreign countries cheaper than in the United States, and taking the tariff off all trust made articles.
In order to make that policy effective, of course, the power to remove and replace the tariff necessarily would be reposed in the executive, lest articles sold at a uniform price when the Bryan schedules were adopted afterward might be sold for less abroad, and trusts might be organized afterwards; for Mr. Bryan would not wish to be calling a special session of congress to revise the tariff every time he suspected a trust or foreign underselling. But a free trader might ask why doesn't he put everything on the free list, anyway?

THE ATTITUDE OF THE LEADERS.
Now he comes directly to the question of trusts, and he utterly condemns the very name of them, while he confuses the definition. First, let us understand the attitude of the leaders of the two parties on the subject. Mr. Bryan quotes Mr. Taft:
"The combination of capital in large plants to manufacture goods with the greatest economy is just as necessary as the assembling of parts of a machine to the economical and more rapid manufacture of what in old times was made by hand."

In other words, Mr. Taft and the Republican party recognize organization as the spirit of the times. It is nature's own pattern—abundance of waste. The doing away with waste and extravagance—the economy of money, time and energy—is a modern business doctrine. The party recognizes the theory of cooperation among laboring men and of capital as vital. Bryan does not recognize the principle of it, but goes out of his way to commend labor unions on hand and without reason, apparently for the purpose of getting their votes.

WHAT IS A TRUST?
Mr. Bryan says: "A trust best can be defined as a corporation which controls so large a proportion of the total quantity of any article used in this country, as to be able to regulate the price and terms of sale." Bryan says the "Democratic party does not oppose all corporations", but let us see. Suppose a corporation owned and controlled the only diamond mine in the world and that it was in the United States; so that the corporation was "able to regulate the price and terms of sale." That would be a trust, according to Mr. Bryan's definition. Let us suppose that an individual owned the only diamond mine and so was "able to regulate the price and terms of sale." Why would he not be a trust, since Mr.
Bryan makes the essential qualification ability "to fix the price and terms of sale?"

Now, as a matter of fact, neither would he be a trust. The quantity controlled and the ability to "fix the price and terms of sale," have nothing to do with the definition of a trust. A trust is something reposed in the confidence of another, and that definition applies whether the word be used in the popular sense of designating one of our modern commercial creations, or whether it refers to the old common law trust.

Let us take an example of a trust.
Some years ago "hending works" all over the country were confronted with this problem: they were required to purchase some $30,000 worth of stock, work it up and keep it on hand six months before disposing of it. They delivered on thirty days' time, making nine months from the time they purchased their stock before they realized on it. In the meantime paying the hands and expenses of operating their plants, it spelled ruin for most of them. Then the Standard Gear Wood company was born. One member from each "hending wood" concern became a member of the Standard Gear Wood company, which bought up all the products of every hending concern on ninety days' time, as soon as the product was ready for market, thus reducing the time in which the producing companies realized on their investment from nine to three months. The Standard Gear Wood company sold to the buggy manufacturers, and it was a trust. It was a monopoly, but it was not organized by rapacious monsters, who were trying to corner the supply of buggy essentials. It was organized by resourceful men, who found themselves confronted with the alternative of ruination or cooperation.

Let us assume that the Standard Oil company, of New Jersey, in its own name owned all the vast properties of the subsidiary corporations that really compose the Standard Oil company. That would not be a trust, though none the less a monopoly. But the Standard Oil company of Indiana, the Standard Oil company of Ohio, the Standard Oil company of New Jersey, The Union Tank Line, the Waters-Pierce Oil company, and the hundreds of other corporations, merged into the Standard Oil company through holding concerns and trustships, constitute a trust; if they would constitute a trust, if they didn't own an estimable fraction on one per cent of the oil products of the country and didn't cut any figure in the "price or terms of sale."

There is an evil growth apparent; but shall we employ to remove it from our delicate commercial organism, a surgeon who doesn't understand the structure into which he is going to carve and who recklessly confuses the names of diseased portions, that are often identical but never synonymous? Bryan criticizes Taft, because while Taft admits the existence of evils in our commercial system, he does not propose a specific remedy for all the ailments. Does your family doctor immediately upon ascertaining that you have a fever, announce to you the exact nature of your disease and prescribe a medicine, that he guarantees to cure you?
Doesn't he rather describe your symptoms and through them endeavor to arrive at the nature of the cause, and proceed to remedy that? Doesn't he, while prescribing for you, study the condition of your vital organs and watch the effect of the medicine on your heart, even changing the course of treatment if he finds the effect deleterious. How would a quack do?
Would he watch your heart, as he does you with his nostrum? Ah! there is the difference. That is why Taft is not outlining a specific. He recognizes the symptoms more clearly than does Bryan; but he also understands that when the pulse jumps to 110 beats a minute, normal heart action accounts for most of the beats and the fever for the difference only between normal and the extreme.
Taft would not stop the heart beating altogether. He prefers removing the cause of the fever, and allowing the commercial pulse to resume normal in the natural way and proper time.
To apply our figure: if the Republican party is responsible in any degree for the financial stringency from which we are just recovering, it is by reason of the temporarily prostrating shock, resulting from efforts to remedy commercial evils. The shock was unavoidable, but it indicates the delicacy of the operation, and the necessity of having a surgeon, who has regard for preserving the life of the patient more than for making a clean job of whacking off the diseased portion.

SIXTEEN TO ONE AGAIN.

Bryan always pretends exact knowledge. Bear in mind that in 1906, when he was the advocate of bimetalism, he propounded the arbitrary ratio of sixteen to one and clung to it.

Now observe his trust remedy: "making a manufacturing or trading corporation engaged in interstate commerce to take out a federal license before it shall be permitted to control as much as 25 percent of the product in which it deals, the license to prohibit the control by such corporation of more than fifty per cent of the total amount."

Every voter should study this proposition until he can clearly see the system in operation: Bryan's with his executive force determining, when a concern is controlling 25 per cent of the product and then compelling it to take out a federal license; the same executive department determining when a concern is controlling fifty percent, and checking it—Bryan knows how!

Bryan, the apostle of free silver, declares that the free coinage of silver at the ratio of sixteen to one was a cure for all our commercial troubles, and his theory played upon the fancy of the imaginative until they believed that, by increasing the per capita of flat money everybody in reality would have more cash. Now Bryan says that by "prohibiting" a federal licensed corporation controlling more than fifty per cent of the product, he will remedy the trust evil.

There's the most brazen chicanery.
Bryan condemns a combination in every form. Yet, he does not mention any cause for it, and does not propose any way of removing the cause. HE PROPOSES TO CHECK IT. If he could prevent monopolies and combinations forming, he would not have to violate all Democratic principles and propose an elaborate federal system for stopping monopolistic tendencies at a certain fixed point. Then why does he arbitrarily designate fifty per cent of the product as the limit of commercial expansion?
We believe that a resourceful domineering man, controlling less than fifty per cent of some products, can "fix the price and terms of sale."

Bryan might as well try to stop a flood by building a dam to hold the waters back from the lower stretches of a stream, as to check the onward sweep of monopoly after it has acquired the unrestricted control of fifty per cent of the product. While the dam holds, the lowlanders may twirl in the contentment of fenced security; but the dam neither prevents the flood nor dissipates it. The dam collects the waters, storing up latent energy until the accumulated pressure bursts the dam, and carries leath and destruction an hundred fold more disastrous by reason of the very means employed to check it. Mr.
Bryan may interpose an arbitrary prohibition to commercial expansion at fifty percent of the entire quantity, but either the monopoly will find a way around the arbitrary check or the dam will burst under the pressure and the channel of trade be obliterated in a commercial flood that will devastate the country.

A good engineer would practice reforestation of the watershed at the source of the stream and take scientific steps to prevent the flood by removing its cause; or, recognizing the natural recurrence of the phenomenon, introduce means to carry away the surplus flood with the least variation from normal.

Either the natural and proper tendencies of the times is toward cooperation and combination in the "field of labor and of capital, or it is not. If it is natural and proper, then the monopolistic evils should be removed without obstructing the current of trade. If Mr. Bryan thinks cooperation and combination are altogether wrong in principle, he should propose means to prevent combinations, and not merely interpose an artificial bar after a monopolistic tendency has been followed to the extent of acquiring fifty per cent of the entire quantity of any one product.

HE ALSO OPPOSES COMPETITION.

Bryan quotes Taft: "To supervise the business of corporations in such a way as to fix the price of commodities and compel the rate at such price is as absurd and socialistic plank as was ever inserted by a Democratic political platform."

Bryan says himself: "Why should such a corporation be permitted to sell at one price in one part of the country and at another price in another part? What reason can a corporation have for such discrimination?
Prices are not made as a matter of favor; when a big corporation sells to the people of one section at one price and to the people of another section at another price—the cost of transportation, being taken into consideration—there is a reason for it, and the reason is almost every case to be found in the effort to destroy a competitor."

You Business Man, who does the same thing, can you afford to vote for Bryan? Why does Bryan always use the term corporation? If a man or a firm should sell to the people of one section at one price and to the people of another section at another price, would it not be just as heinous offense, as that of a corporation doing the same thing for the same purpose?

But, Mr. Bryan again fails to discriminate between right and wrong.
When concerns conspire to monopolize a product, and in the course of that conspiracy sell goods below cost in order to drive out a competitor, public policy dictates that the conspiracy should be checked; not because it is inherently immoral to sell below cost—else our retail merchants on Broadway are habitual violators of the moral law—but because the conspiracy, of which the reduction is a part, is against public policy.
Mr. Bryan, while favoring the old time out-throat competitive system, would denounce every man, who cuts the price in one territory where he has a competitor, and holds it up in a territory where he has the trade to himself.

A Paducah produce concern was indicted. In Callaway county on the very ground, which Bryan assumes.
A Callaway buyer alleged that the Paducah concern and Armour conspired to drive him out of the trade by paying prices for produce than he could afford to pay, and cited in substantiation the fact that the same concern paid less for produce in Marshall county. The concern has no competition in Marshall, and has no store in which to place the purchases, consequently increasing the cost of handling the produce from Marshall. It has competition in Callaway and is forced to bid against the competitor, the price thus being stimulated.

Of course, the charge was dismissed for want of proof; and, of course, Bryan's idea will be rejected by all reasonable men as foolish.

Bryan opposes combinations as wrong, and then condemns the very essence of competition—price cutting and sharp practice—as morally wrong. These great industrial monopolies, of which he talks much, were born in times of the keenest commercial competition, and the rebates and price cutting to which they resorted, were for the purpose of defeating competitors.

BRYAN'S FUTURE.

Nothing will fit Bryan's theories but Socialism, the reduction of all property to common ownership, paternalism in government, and the monopoly of communism. Mr. Bryan's inconsistency apparently results from an effort to harmonize his opinions with his ambition. He is a Socialist at heart, and a Democrat in name. If he lives to a grand old age, we expect him to become the Tolstoy of America, visionary, perhaps, and unpractical, but accomplishing a good by his preachments he could never hope to accomplish by executive authority, and winning for himself that undying name for which he seeks in vain by political preferment. If Bryan would put aside his ambition and not embarrass his real views with such a decided inebriation of opportunism, he would be an incalculable force in righting existing wrongs.

As it is, the only effect of his success would be the demolition of the Roosevelt school of politics, and the rehabilitation of the reactionary element. His election would be considered as a rebuke to Roosevelt and his policies, nothing more.

There is nothing historically Democratic in Bryan's ideas or platform.
Democracy has always stood for state sovereignty. The platform of 1908 says that it does not intend to restrict the authority of the state, and then goes on to provide for federal license for certain corporations. It looks suspicious that Bryan found it necessary to inform anybody that his intention was not to abridge the authority of the states, especially when in the same sentence the authority of the federal government in that particular was extended. Bryan has expressed himself in favor of government ownership of railroads, although relegating the issue to the future, while declaring specifically in favor of the greatest scope for individual action. His platform denounces the administration for spending much money, and without advocating a single retrenchment, declares in favor of hiring experts at an expense of millions to make a physical valuation of railroad property. It advocates another navy for the Pacific, that would cost billions. Even then the platform denounces militarism in round terms.

Bryan will be defeated. Then we expect him to retire from active efforts to reach the presidency, and devote his time and talents to consistent arrangement of present day evils.
Such men as Bryan are able by their genius to swing public opinion behind reforms and force their adoption on political agencies with which the reformer is not in sympathy. Bryan is really great; but his greatness is dimmed by the shallowest demagogism in this campaign.

He paused, and Armitage met his eyes. They were very blue and kind, eyes that spoke of sincerity and delicacy, such eyes as a leader of forlorn hopes would like to know, were behind him when he gave the order to charge.
Then a curious thing happened. It may have been the contact of eye with eye that awoke question and response between them. It may have been a need in one that touched a chord of helplessness in the other, but suddenly Armitage leaped to his feet and grasped the outstretched hands of the little soldier.

"Oscar!" he said, and repeated very softly, "Oscar!"

The man was deeply moved, and tears sprang into his eyes. Armitage laughed, holding him at arm's length.
"None of that nonsense! Sit down!" He turned to the door, opened it, and peered into the hall, locked the door again, then motioned the man to a chair.

"So you deserted your mother country, did you, and have borne arms for the glorious republic?"

"I served in the Philippines—yes."

"Thank, little, encloments, Oscar?"
"I was a sergeant, and the surgeon could not find the bullet after Big Band, Luzon, so they were sorry and gave me a certificate and $2 a month to my pay," said the man so sweetly and colorfully that Armitage laughed.

"You have done well, Oscar; honor me by accepting a cigar."

The man took a cigar from the box which Armitage extended, but which he did not light. He held it rather ab-stainingly in his hand and continued to stare.

"You are not dead—Mr.—Armitage, but your father?"

"My father is dead, Oscar."

"He was a good man," said the soldier.

"Yes, he was a good man," repeated Armitage gravely. "I am alive, and yet I am dead, Oscar. Do you grasp the idea? You were a good friend when we were both in the great forest. If I should want you to help me
now—"

The man jumped to his feet and attended at attention
that Armitage laughed and slapped his knee.
"You are well
taught, Sergeant
Oscar! Sit down.
I am going to trust you.
My affairs just now are not without importance to your trifling danger, and I shall attend to them."

"There are en-cloments—yes?" and Oscar nodded his head solemnly in acceptance of the intimation.

"I am going to trust you absolutely —you have no confidants—you are not married?"

"How should a man be married who is a soldier? I have no friends. They are unprovable," declared Oscar solemnly.

"I fear you are a pessimist, Oscar, but a pessimist who keeps his mouth shut is a good ally. Now, if you are not afraid of being shot or struck with a knife, and if you are willing to obey my orders for a few weeks we may be able to do some business. First, remember that I am Mr. Armitage. You must learn that now and remember it for all time. And if any one should ever suggest anything else—"

The man nodded his comprehension.
"That will be the time for Oscar to be dumb. I understand, Mr. Armitage."

Armitage smiled. The man presented so vigorous a picture of health, his simple character was so transparently reflected in his eyes and face that he did not in the least question him.

"You are an intelligent person, sergeant. If you are equally honest, you will be deaf when I tell you something are asked, then I think we shall get on."

"You should remember," began Oscar.

"I remember nothing," observed Armitage sharply, and Oscar was quite humble again. Armitage opened a trunk and took out an envelope, from which he drew several papers and a small map, which he unfolded and spread on the table. He marked a spot with his lead pencil and passed the map to Oscar.

"Do you think you could find that place?"

The man bent hard over it for several minutes.

"Yes, it would be easy." And he nodded his head several times as he named the railroad stations nearest the point indicated by Armitage. The place was in one of the mountainous counties of Virginia, fifteen miles from an east and west railway line. Armitage opened a diary recorded deed which conveyed to himself the title to 2,000 acres of land; and also a curiously complicated abstract of title showing the successive transfers of ownership from colonial days down through the years of Virginia's splendor to the dead time when battle shook the world. The title had passed from the

"The blood is the life."

Science has never gone beyond the above simple statement of scripture. But it has illuminated that statement, and given it a meaning ever broadening with the increasing breadth of knowledge.
When the blood is "bad" or impure it is not alone the body which suffers through disease. The brain is also clouded, the mind and judgment are affected, and many an evil deed or impure thought may be directly traced to the impurity of the blood. Pure blood can be made pure by the use of Dr.
Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It cures and purifies the blood, thereby curing, pimples, blotches, eruptions and other cutaneous affections, as eczema, tetter, or salt-rheum, hives and other manifestations of impure blood.

In the cure of scrofulous swellings, enlarged glands, open eating ulcers, or old sores, the "Golden Medical Discovery" has performed the most marvelous cures. In cases of old sores, or open eating ulcers, it is well to apply to the open sores Dr.
Pierce's All-Healing Salve, which possesses wonderful healing potency when used as an application to the sores in conjunction with the use of "Golden Medical Discovery" as a blood cleansing constitutional treatment. If your druggist don't happen to have the "All-Healing Salve" in stock, you can easily procure it by enclosing fifty-four cents in postage stamps to Dr. R. V. Pierce, 603 Main St., Buffalo, N. Y., and it will come to you by return post. Most druggists keep it as well as the "Golden Medical Discovery."

You can't afford to accept any medicine of unknown composition as a substitute for "Golden Medical Discovery," which is a medicine of known composition, having a complete list of ingredients in plain English on its bottle-wrapper, the same being stated as correct under each of Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pills regulate and invigorate stomach, liver and bowels.

receiver of a defunct shooting club to Armitage, who had been charmed by the description of the property as set forth in an advertisement and lured, moreover, by the amazingly small price at which the preserve was offered.

"It is a farm—yes?"

"It is a wilderness, I fancy," said Armitage. "I have never seen it. I may never see it, for that matter. But you will find your way there, going first to this town, Lamar, studying the country, keeping your mouth shut and seeing what the improvements on the ground amount to. There's some sort of a luncheon there, built by the shooting club. Here's a description of the place, on the strength of which I bought it. You may take these papers along to judge the size of the wildlife."

"Yes, sir."

"And a couple of good horses, plenty of commissary stores—plain military necessaries, you understand—and some bedding should be provided. I want you to take full charge of this matter and get to work as quickly as possible.
It may be a little homesome down there among the hills, but if you serve me well you shall not regret it."

"Yes, I am quite satisfied with the job," said Oscar.

"And after you have reached the place and settled yourself you will tell the postmaster and telegraph operator who you are and where you may be found so that messages may reach you promptly. If you get an unsigned message advising you of let me consider —a shipment of stores, you may expect my note soon. On the other hand, you may not see me at all. We'll consider that our agreement lasts until the first snow flies next winter. You are a soldier. There need be no further discussion of this matter, Oscar."

The man nodded gravely.

"And it is well for you not to reappear in this hotel. If you should be questioned or leaving here—"

"I have not been here—is it not?"

"It is," replied Armitage, smiling.
"You read and write English?"

"Yes; one must to serve in the army."

"If you should see a big service with a neck like a tall and a head the size of a pea, who speaks very fast and loud, you will do well to keep out of his way unless you find a good place to the him up. I advise you not to continue without special orders. Do you understand?"

That carefully arranged and artistically rendered programs of this character, may do much in the musical upliftment of any community, cannot be gainsaid, and the increasing interest in the present recitals, upon the part of Paducah music lovers, is most gratifying to all who have the musical betterment of their city at heart. NEW ORIGIN OF LIFE THEORY.

Never Begun, Always Has Been and Will Be By Radiation Pressure.

The latest development of astrophysics and philosophy have taken a rather surprising turn. It is now held that life is and ver has been coexistent with time and space; that as we cannot admit that there ever was a beginning of time or of space, and that both of these are of infinite extension, so life never began, but always has been. The only effort at demonstrating the physical possibility of this has been made by Dr. Arrhenius of Sweden, who thinks that his theory of radiation pressure is sufficient to account for the distribution of life throughout the whole of the universe as we now conceive it. That is to say, he finds that radiation pressure from our sun, and from all of the suns which shine at night in the sky, has been sufficient to propel minute bits of cosmic dust to the confines of the material world and that these can easily have been (and are) sufficiently large to carry the "spores" of life to infinity and, wherever they light, to start a new creation of life which by evolution may reach the highest development—man, for instance. There is something singularly attractive about this theory, but it must always remain a theory, since absolute demonstration is impossible.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

THOUGHT OWN DOWNFALL.

Head of Turkish Secret Police Tells of His Actions.

London, Aug. 26.—Zia Bey, the former head of Turkey's secret police, who is in refuge in London, in an interview today said:

"I am glad to be here and it is not possible that I will ever return to Turkey. You must remember that at the bidding of my superiors, I have been the means of ruining ministers, and 170 Turks, many of them members of the most honorable families, during my term of office, disappeared. It mattered not who the persons were to be removed, the other from the Yildiz (the residence of the sultan) were implicitly obeyed. To be denounced by the secret police, was sufficient to ruin any one. Can you wonder that Turkey has seen the last of me?"

Another Hold-Up.

Cody, Wyo., Aug. 26.—In true western style, a lone highwayman held up the Cody-Meeteetse stage coach, at the point of a Winchester rifle, forced the passengers and the driver to leave the vehicle, and stand up in a row before him, and then deposited all their valuables in front of them on the ground. He secured about $1,500 in cash and a number of pieces of jewelry.

It is possible, but not probable, that the highwayman is the same that held up and robbed two stage coaches in the Yellowstone park. The scene of the Cody hold-up is more than 100 miles from the Yellowstone affair.

Originally the office was administered exclusively for the benefit of the members of unions, but it is now conducted in the interest of socialistic organizations and is an information bureau available for workmen generally.

Newkirk, Okla., Aug. 25.—After successfully eluding a churchyard crowd by coming with his bride to Newkirk in an automobile, following his wedding in Ponca City last night, Dr. George Niemann, of Ponca City, was caught by his tormentors as he was heading a ribbon Santa Fe passenger train here. A log chain with a mammoth cowhill attached was fastened about his neck, the key to

of the lock being thrown in a creek. Niemann was then forced to board the train and proceed on his wedding journey. Outwitted the churchyard crowd had bearded the train at Ponca City, unknown to Niemann.

BIG CONFERENCE AT DES MOINES

Nearly 1,000 Republicans Meet to Allay Strife.

Cummins Issues Order for Special Session to Tackle for Election of Senator.

EFFORTS ARE SUCCESSFUL.

Des Moines, Ia., Aug. 26.—Nearly a thousand Republicans were in conference here in an effort to allay the factional strife which has torn the party during the past few years and which was believed by many to menace the success of the Republican ticket in this state. The feature of the occasion was Governor Cummins' announcement that he had decided to call a special session of the legislature to dispose of the senatorial matter which since the death of Allison has threatened to renew the old fight. This special session will be asked to amend the state primary law to permit the Republican voters to select a senatorial successor in the regular election in November instead of leaving it to a legislative caucus.

In the conference opposition was expressed to such proceedings, but Cummins' announcement settled the matter and the decision was generally accepted in good spirit, the understanding being that the law be amended that only Republican voters could participate in the selection of a Republican senatorial candidate.

Many party leaders were present and most of the members of the Iowa delegation in congress. Senator Dooliver was one of the speakers, accepting the decision of the governor in good part and declaring himself unequivocally for a harmony program. George D. Perkins, editor of the Sioux City Journal, a bitter opponent of Cummins, and John F. Lacey were also among the speakers declaring for harmony.

Lacey once or twice stirred up a little disagreeable sentiment by his references to the last fight. Cummins spoke at some length, explaining that his reason for asking that the senatorship be submitted to the primary election was that it would make possible the election of all Republican legislative candidates and provide for an unbiased expression of the voters on the matter. State Auditor Carroll, Republican nominee for governor, was also one of the speakers.

The conference was held under the auspices of the state central committee and it is generally believed here to have been productive of good in bringing the factions together for a united fight for the entire Republican ticket.

Issues Proclamation.

Des Moines, Ia., Aug. 26.—Governor Cummins issued a proclamation for a special session of the legislature to amend the primary law, fixing August 31 as the day for convening. The proclamation sets forth the governor's reason for convening the legislature, his belief that an overwhelming majority of the people of the state are in favor of expressing the choice for senator in a primary election.

It also specified that the legislature is convened to amend the present primary law to make such a choice possible for an expression of choice between the candidate for United States senator at the general election in November when the choice of any political party becomes unavailing at the regular June primary through death or otherwise.

TEMPLE AS RESTAURANT

Mexican House of Worship at Museum of Natural History.

The interior of a temple used for religious ceremonies about 4,000 years ago by a Mexican tribe has been reproduced in the basement of the American Museum of Natural History and will be opened in about a month as a public restaurant. The work was done by J. D. Fligins, of the department of preparation and exhibition, under the direction of Dr. Harmon C. Bumpus, the director.

The temple which has been copied was one of the ruins of Mitla, in Oaxaca, Mex., the masonry of which was of superior order. The mural decorations were purely geometric and in marked contrast with the mythological life-form designs found in other sections of Mexico. The lintels over the doors were carved in stone, and the panels were mosaic work made out of small pieces of stone set in with an extremely fine jointure. Three rooms have been reproduced, says the New York Tribune; one about thirty-two feet square, and the other thirty-two feet long, eight feet wide and twelve feet high. The decorations of the largest room were originally formed by more than 100,000 separate pieces of close-grained lava resembling coarse grain sandstone. Each piece fitted the other with such exactness that they locked together without the use of cement. The work of these Mexican Indians was done with tools of flint. These decorations have been exactly reproduced in the museum, so far as the outward appearances and color are concerned, by the uses of cement and plaster.

Mr. Fligins said that the restaurant would be fitted up with the old-style Mexican furniture and that there was talk of having only Mexican dishes served by waitresses in Mexican costumes.

SOLDIERS PLAY

BASEBALL IN DAYTIME AND ON GUARD DUTY AT NIGHT.

Two Privates Come Up From Birmingham and Get Supply of Sporting Goods.

Doing guard duty at night and playing baseball during spare hours of the day is the routine of life for many of the soldiers that are on duty in the night rider territory. Private Barber and Richards, whose company is stationed at Birmingham, came to Paducah yesterday afternoon and made purchases to supply the soldiers with baseball goods. When the soldier boys left they had gloves and baseballs with their big pistols swinging at their belts were hidden by the bundles. The state soldiers find their only recreation in playing baseball, although the camp monotony is broken occasionally with a skirmish with raiders. The soldiers are good ball tossers and the privates said they had beaten every ball team in the vicinity of Birmingham.

BULL DOGS ON WAR PATH.

Five Children and Attack a Policeman.

Clarksville, Tenn., Aug. 26.—Two little girls were attacked by two bull dogs and bitten in several places.

Mrs. Kate Chadoin, of Hopkinsville, and Miss Ruth Moody, accompanied by two little girls, Topey Moody and Endora Chadoin, aged 10 and 8 years, started down to the river for the purpose of gathering shells. After going down the steps at the Tennessee Central freight depot the two little girls ran ahead and when passing the office of M. H. Clark & Brother, two bull dogs belonging to Napoleon Dalney, a news carrier, who lives in the lot adjoining, ran out of Dalney's yard and attacked the children, mauling the flesh, and one was attempting to drag one of the children into the yard.

Mrs. Chadoin by striking with an umbrella finally succeeded in driving the dogs away, but not until each child was severely bitten. The Chadoin child had a gash torn in one arm so large that it required three stitches to sew it up. She had other severe bruises on the arm and shoulders. The Moody child is suffering with severe bruise, but is not lacerated as badly as the former.

Policemen Fowkes went after the dogs and when he entered the yard they started toward him, when he shot one of them. The dogs then turned and ran under a house. After considerable trouble they were located and killed with a shotgun.

A Country of Tips.

It is supposed by travelers that the tipping system is universal. A Toronto man who visited England last summer appears to think that country is the champion tip-taker, and he relates some of his experiences. "Well, I had tipped every man, from the swell gent who seemed to own the house of commons down to the herring who gobbled the wrong label on my luggage, and I went into the waiting room on the landing stage at Liverpool to wash my hands of everything English, and what do you think started me in the face when I had finished? A placard saying, 'Please tip the basin!'"

He killed it and noticed it to be abnormal about the body, held a post-mortem, resulting in finding two half-grown rabbits and Mr. Wax's cast iron frog.

Anecdote of Marshall.

An anecdote is told of Chief Justice John Marshall. Returning one afternoon from his farm near Richmond, to his home in that city, the hub of his wheel caught on a small sapling growing by the roadside. After striving unsuccessfully for some moments to extricate the wheel, he heard the sound of an axe in the woods and saw a negro man approaching. Hailing him, he said, "If you will get that axe and cut down this tree, I'll give you a dollar." "I can get yer by 'thought no axe of dat's all yer want." "Yes, that's all," said the judge. The man simply backed the horse until the wheel was clear of the sapling, and then brought the vehicle safely around it. "You don't charge a dollar for that, do you?" asked the astonished chief justice. "No, massa; but it's wuf a dollar to turn some folks sense." The darkey got his dollar without further questioning.

And sometimes a man gets married in order to have some one to believe his talk.

her aunt was the old familiar one.

"There's somebody under the bed." A pass key opened the room disclosing a good looking blonde woman of 37, dressed expensively, who gave the name of Mrs. Mabel Dyer. The hotel people said she had drunk nothing but ice water. In fact, she had been ringing for it all day and nothing else.

Dr. Kendall's Revenge.

By Howard Fielding.

Copyright, 1908, by C. W. Hoobe.

IT was about six months that Dr. Sydney Deane had been a medical practitioner in the city of New York, and he had not earned 10 per cent of his expenses, which were very moderate.

He was a throat specialist, but his earnings thus far had come from his own throat and not from the throats of his patients. He had supported himself since his youth and had paid for an expensive professional education by singing. I have heard good judges say that Deane might have taken rank among the few great tenors of the time and have made money by the bushel, but he disliked singing for pay, and he especially, fervently, fancied, disdained, and detested anything whatever that could be called advertising. He had sung chiefly in church choirs and very select concerts and had marvelously succeeded in concealing the fact that he was one of the favorite children of Apollo.

Upon his return from Germany he went to his native town of Eddington, in Connecticut, where he remained three years. He got a few patients, but his salary as tenor in a New Haven church choir constituted more than half his income.

The Kendalls were among the few people in Eddington who had any money, but they never had throat troubles. These seemed to occur among the poor only. Elsa Kendall was called the prettiest girl in the town, and she was the heiress also. To pay court to her was perhaps the only worldly wise thing that Sydney Deane did in his three years' residence in Eddington, but Elsa Kendall grew from eighteen to twenty-one, seeing Deane almost daily except for her own brief absences from the town, and she never knew the nature of his sentiments toward her.

In the early days she fancied herself in love with him. Then she was his friend, adoring only his voice, and at last she came to despise him just a little as a weak man, fitful in his devotion to the properties and incapable of dealing with the world. Reluctantly she forced Deane into the battle. It was her energy that propelled him into the larger field. When he was gone she missed him very much and shed some tears.

In New York Deane made some very nice acquaintances among the doctors, but got no patients.

Deane's stock of money began to run low. His voice was earning him nothing except the admiration of his neighbors and of the wayfarers who passed outside his windows, but he felt that the day was at hand when he must sing for hire. This thought was a thorn in his flesh, and there was another that was even sharper. He had neglected one of Elsa's most urgent admonitions. Worse, he was deceiving her about it. "Look up my uncle, Dr. Kendall, the very first thing," she had said to him. "He will help you."

Deane had "looked him up," as the phrase is understood in New York, and had not been satisfied with the result. To put it mildly, Dr. Kendall was a man who did not avoid notoriety. His name was constantly before the public. Interviews with Dr. Kendall if cut from the daily press and pasted end to end would reach to the planet Neptune and to a double bow-knot. So said a doctor whom Deane ventured to interrogate upon the subject, and he added:

"Kendall is in good standing, of course, and he's an able man, probably one of the best men on the coast that we have, but he advertises himself out of all reason. He has a great the puzzle lay in the cause of the trouble, practice among singers and stage people and lecturers, and they yell his name from morning till night."

This was the last person in the world that Deane cared to know, but he was under bonds to call.
Dr. Kendall was one of those also-intellectually healthy men whose mere presence is a means of sanitation—strongly built and having the air of one who lives much out of doors. He greeted Deane cordially, spoke affectionately of Elsa, made some wise observations on general topics and finally came down to "shop talk."

It appeared that he was expecting a visit from a very interesting patient, a young woman whose achievements might fill a farmer's trumpet in the near future. She was a protégée of Mrs. Sylvestre, the prima donna, who expected great things of her—a very pretty girl, too, and of good family. Celia Winthrop was her name, but she might substitute something with a foreign sound when she made her debut in grand opera. "Supposing that we succeed in putting her voice to rights again," he added. "It's in bad shape just now."

At this point a card was brought to Dr. Kendall, who gave orders that the visitor should be admitted. Deane rose as if to go, but Kendall checked him lustily.
"I want to call you in consultation on this case," he said. "You'll see a wonderful throat in a rather odd condition."

It was an invitation that could not be declined. Deane signified his acquiescence and glanced toward the door.

To his surprise there entered a man of about thirty, a pleasant looking fellow, nicely dressed and with an air of cultivation. Dr. Kendall introduced him at once as Mr. Richards, "whose writings on music and kindred topics are read by everybody." In recognition of this praise Richards glanced at Deane, with a smile, and said, "I'm a reporter."

"I have called Dr. Deane in consultation on the case of Miss Winthrop," said Kendall, and he gave Deane's address, which Richards noted down. "He is a recognized authority on diseases of the vocal chords and is widely known both here and abroad as the author of—"

And he rattled off with perfect accuracy the titles of a half dozen of Deane's contributions to medical publications.

Deane observed, with alarm, that Richards was writing shorthand in his notebook.

"Now, as to this case of Miss Winthrop," continued Kendall. "It is a matter of considerable public interest, and I have her permission to speak freely. She has suffered an almost total loss of voice. This is the condition."

He proceeded to describe in popular language a condition of congestion and paresis of the larynx, with spasms of the bronchial tube. He took a leaf from Richards' notebook and drew a diagram. Nothing that he said indicated to Deane's inattentive mind that there was anything unusual in the case, except the failure of treatment to relieve it, but it was all so entertainingly expressed and with such a hearty, fatherly sympathy for the young woman in her affliction that Deane could not deny its merit as a good story.

At the close of the narrative Miss Winthrop and her patron arrived. Miss Winthrop was a quiet mannered, pretty girl, with dark, dreamy eyes and a singularly white skin, subject to peculiarly rapid and beautiful play of color in accord with her emotions. She was obviously consumed by anxiety to her voice, and her eyes filled with tears when she tried to speak of it. Her "Interview" was furnished by Mrs. Sylvestre, and it was a gem of sparkling cleverness.

When Richards had gone Dr. Kendall devoted himself to his patient, with Deane as his colleague, but the younger physician speedily perceived a shifting of the responsibility to his own shoulders. The puzzle of the case lay in the cause of the trouble. Its history disclosed no reason for the affliction. Miss Winthrop was in perfect health except for the local condition, which seemed to be the result of some malign enchantment. Deane was expected to solve this riddle. He was put upon his mettle.

"Well, my young friend," said Kendall when the patient and her patron had departed, "what do you think of the case?"

"I have seen a precisely similar condition," he replied, "resulting from extreme personal susceptibility to the perfume of certain flowers—in that case, white lilies. The only thing that bothers me is that Miss Winthrop denies having been subjected to any such influence. And a singer of Mrs. Sylvestre's experience must be well aware of the danger of perfumes. In a case of this kind she'd suspect flowers instantly if any were about. In fact, Miss Winthrop says that Mrs. Sylvestre asked her at once about it, but up to that time, singularly enough, Miss Winthrop had never heard that odors were dangerous. At least she had never paid any attention to the matter."

"And you conclude?" said Kendall, smiling.

"Miss Winthrop does not impress me as perfectly frank," responded Deane. "If I could believe that there was a secret romance, that some author not favored by Mrs. Sylvestre had sent flowers on the sly to Miss Winthrop, I'd feel that I was on safe ground. Flowers sent as a love token are pressed against the face; their perfume is inhaled deeply. That would account for the severity and persistence of this case."

Kendall rose and took Deane's hand warmly. Still holding it, he led Deane to a closet, which he opened. Upon a shelf was a cubical pasteboard box. Kendall lifted the cover and disclosed a withered bouquet of violets.

"There's the little joker," he said. "Mrs. Sylvestre's maid got it for me day before yesterday. Mrs. Sylvestre doesn't know anything about it. Miss Winthrop knows that I have these things, but of course she wouldn't tell you in Mrs. Sylvestre's presence. The secret author is a little Frenchman who was on the steamer with them coming over. He went back yesterday, I'm happy to say. I hope you'll excuse me for making a mystery of this, Dr. Deane. I had a curiosity to see you work on it. You're all right."

"But you told Mr. Richards that the case was very obscure?"

"That's all right," laughed Kendall. "I'm saving the violets for another story."

On the following afternoon a very elegant automobile stopped before Deane's door. He could not suppose that the occupants had come to see him as he watched them alight, but they had. They were a mother and daughter, and the former introduced the conversation by saying that she had read an article in a morning paper about a Miss Winthrop.

"I think it must be very much like my daughter's case," she said.
In reality there was no similarity, but the daughter was an excellent patient nevertheless. She had no sooner gone away than another lady came from directly across the street. She had not seen the article in the newspaper, but she had seen the automobile, and it had encouraged her.
Two days later the story of the violets appeared in all the papers, the romance very delicately touched upon. The influence of perfumes upon the voice, well known to doctors, was a new thing to the public, and the reporters made the most of it.
Dr. Deane figured in the story as an expert of the highest attainments who, in association with the famous Dr. Kendall, had penetrated the mystery of an obscure and interesting case. The gratitude of Miss Winthrop was pictured in moving terms.
It was all true enough. Deane had seen Miss Winthrop again at Kendall's office, and the girl was far upon the road to complete recovery. She had confessed to Mrs. Sylvestre her passing fascination and the secret reception of the violets from the Frenchman. All had been forgiven.
A few days later Mrs. Sylvestre and Miss Winthrop called upon Deane, and he sang with them, his voice exciting the unbounded admiration of both ladies, who begged him almost with

WILL PRODUCE HAINS' LETTERS

Attorney Says They Are as Important as Wife's.

When Soldier Captive Wears Uniform and Says He Must Report to His Colonel.

AN AFFECTING OCCURRENCE

New York, Aug. 26.—That there are in existence a number of letters exchanged by William E. Hains and Claudia Hains, wife of the man who killed him, and that these letters will be an important factor in Hains' defense are facts made public for the first time.

Attorney John F. McIntyre, counsel for Captain Hains, Jr., and his brother, Thornton Jenkins Hains, said that the letters would take rank with Mrs. Hains' confession when the men were placed on trial.

"And I have no doubt that, by means of the confession and this correspondence, I shall be able to clear both men," he asserted.

"Are there many letters?" he was asked.

"I don't want to discuss the subject that fully," was the reply.

"Are they now in your possession?"

"They are accessible at any moment for the defense."

Further than this Mr. McIntyre would not go, but he laid great stress on the importance of the letters and their value in court. It was predicted by friends of both Captain and Mrs. Hains that they would be reconciled before the end of this week. Efforts are being made to hasten their meeting, and their friends said they would not be surprised if Mrs. Hains visited her husband in his cell within a couple of days.

Captain Hains and Thornton Hains were before Magistrate Galloway in the Long Island City court. The captain had donned his full uniform because his leave of absence expired, and although he is detained by the civil authorities, he also occupies the position of an army officer "on duty."

The hearing was postponed until next Friday by agreement of attorneys for both sides. As Captain Hains and his brother were taken from the building on the way back to jail an affecting scene took place between the soldier prisoner and his chief counselor, John F. McIntyre.

"I must report at Fort Hancock today," said the captain. "My leave of absence is up."

Attorney McIntyre told him that such a trip would be impossible, and the prisoner said:

"Will you tell Colonel Hains, the commandant at the fort, how I feel? Tell him to send here for me, that I want to go back to my post."

Attorney McIntyre said, after Hains was led away:

"He insisted to his guards this morning that he must go back to the fort, that it would be absolutely necessary for him to wear his uniform today."

The attendance during the regular just closed at Du Quoin is estimated to have been 25,000 and the gathering is said to have been one of the best in the history of the society, though the old members are rapidly filling the ranks of those who have answered "taps" to the last time and passed to their reward.

Name on Fractured Ankle.

A new fad has started at Embogshi lane. Misses Boardman, Sherman and Diamond, who are here on a vacation, while running through the woods near their boarding-house, fell, and each sustained a fractured ankle.

The three limbs were encased in plaster of paris. Shortly afterward the first sympathizer to call on Miss Boardman tenderly placed the injured leg in her lap and peddled her name on the plaster casting.

The idea took, and the plaster cast bears many names. Young men are not permitted to sign.—Catskill, N. Y. Telegram to the Chicago Inter-Ocean.

KENTUCKY SYNOD

COLORADO CUMBERLAND PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH IN SESSION

Meets Here and Elects Mayfield Minister Moderator—Many in Attendance.

The Kentucky synod of the Cumberland Presbyterian church, colored, began its annual session with the Paducah congregation last night with a large number of ministers in attendance. The Rev. W. L. Clark, D. D., who was moderator of the synod for many years, died since the last meeting and by appointment of the clerk.

Dr. J. J. Simpson, the opening sermon was preached by the Rev. G. W. Glynn, who took as his text "Jesus the Way," from John 11:16. Dr. Simpson then announced the synod open for business, and after prayer by the Rev. R. Todd, the Rev. M. S. McCauley, of Mayfield, was elected moderator. The Rev. McCauley, in thanking the synod for the honor, spoke feelingly of the life and work of Dr. Clark, his predecessor. He also made a strong appeal for support of the synod in its educational and missionary work.

The synod will be in session until Thursday when a state Sunday school convention will be organized and continue in session over Sunday.

The Rev. C. G. Howlett is pastor of the Paducah church, and under his ministrations the church has made a wonderful progress.
